LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

My apologies to all for the copying condition of last months Q.M.H.C.. It was not up standard quality (even for the QMHC..). To make up for it, I have included in this months issue (for those who received last months) another set of pages with the buckskin models. Some of the photos were dark, so this is about as good as they are going to get. There was a blank or misprinted page just before the buckskin model section due to a copying goof. So last months issue had an ~~odd~~ number of pages. I hope this makes up a little bit for it.

Also, for those whose ad was unreadable, ~~submit~~ I owe you an extra ad. Use it whenever you wish.

As you can see from page 4, there has been an increase in the subscription and advertizing prices. The new rate is $1.00 + a 22¢ stamp per issue, available on the 4 or 12 month terms. All I wanted to do was cover the cost of the postage increase. I increased the advertizing rates by 50%. However, I have dropped the photo ads extra price so photo ads will usually be at a 1/3 or 1/2 page ~~per photo~~ price. It does not matter any more whether there is a photo included in the ad or not, they are the same price.

As you can see, I received a good response to the letter (for those who could read it) from Heather Wells. I'd love to hear more and remember I always welcome letters to the editor.

One reader has asked that approximate values be placed along with the photos of models. I do not feel qualified to do this, however, would anybody consider setting up a pricing guide for models?

I hope to have the information for the questionnaire set up for next month. Gotta go, no more paper. HAPPY EASTER

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

(I am repeating Heather's letter since I received some responses and the photocopying was a disaster last month.)

I feel I must make a comment---I liked the newspaper article about Diane Fisher but I honestly feel that a monetary value should not be mentioned when "talking: to the general public. Models that might have been sold at garage sales are assumed vakuabke and now priced much higher. A "true collector's find" will be less and less and the antique dealers and collectible people will be picking them up and reselling at ridiculous prices!!!! Lest's keep our secret safe at least for a few more years!! Sorry to steam off but I had to say something!!

As for heather's comment, I'd love to make one also, but since my copy is blurred in that spot, I can only hazard a guess at her comments. If it has anything to do with publicizing our hobby nationally or on a large scale, I am all for that. I am active in several other hobbies (comics, paperbacks) and I am quite distrubed by the anoubt of free publicity they get while dealers of collectibles know absolutely nothing about Breyers. I have written to many and although most have at least a vague knowledge of Hartlnds, their knowledge of horse-collecting was a big zero.

Aren't we all tired of hearing about those Barbie collector's too? I have seen several articles written about "western T-V show collectibles with NO mention whatsoever of Hartlands, and of animal figures collectobles with NO mention of horses.

I have read Hobbies magazine for the past 4 years and although they have several articles by cat collectors on cats and doll collectors on dolls, there have not even been a mention of horse collecting in it. To tell the truth, I am quite tired of having to explain my hobby from square 1 to every dealer I meet.

Many lesser hobbies get publicity and although prices do go up, they always do anyway! And look at some of the prices within the hobby itself- out instability (?) is already killing us off!! I think its high time the hobby gets the exposure it deserves. We've hidden long enough, and the only way we can stimulate the hobby more is by people recognizing, all over the U.S., that these models are valuable. Most people I have met say "Oh, I had some, but I gave them to so- and so's daughter, etc." Exposure may ultimately lead to higher prices, but it will also create an influx of models on the market that may have been relegated to someones toy chest or closet.

A hobby, our size, shouldn't be kept secret, let's face it, just about everyone has or has had some Breyers or Hartlands in the past and they ought to know people like us care enough about them to collect them!

Start passing out the spare Breyer manuals to people at FLA Markets. It's do us all good!

ANDREA GURDON

I agree with Heather, completely. When people go to garage sales, swap meets, etc., they should not tell the sellers these old discontinued Breyers are worth a lot to collectors. If the sellers get wind of it, they will start combing the garage sales and asking ridiculous prices for them. A good example is the Hartland Horse and Rider sets. From a collector you can still get them at a reasonable price. But from someone who deals in old toys and dolls, they will ask $100.00 or more for them because the Hartland Baseball players bring that much. If these people begin to realize how "collectible" they Breyers have become, pretty soon, no one will be able to find one at a garage sale or swap meet and the prices will be out of most people's price range. So I agree with Heather that we should keep it to ourselves. It's very nice that Diane had an article with pictures of her collection, but the value of the horses should not be discussed with the general public.

LANI KELLER

I agree that too much publicity may cause model horse collecting to backfire and we may have to pay much higher prices for models. However, I do let some dealers at the flea markets know I am looking for model horses because they will often go to garage sales and other flea markets before I do and have the opportunity to pick up the models. (I do not, however, let them know just what kind of prices I can get for some models.)

I would like more publicity for the hobby because we all get those weird looks when we mention we are model horsemen. My partner thinks I am crazy and I doubt believes there are many more like me out there. Doll collecting has come to the point where people have accepted it as an investment, and a "sane" thing to do. We are no longer "playing with dolls". I hope that someday model horsemanship will be the same.

Also as to price quotes, I have been interviewed by many reporters who are looking for the sensational and the eye grabber. Often, a statement such as "models can range in price from $2.00 to $200.00 with an average of $15.00 for a discontinued model" can be turned into "Many of these models sell for $200.00". Quite a difference with paraphrasing and poetic license. It isn't the statements that are made, it's how they are heard by the reporter.

Publicity will get us "out of the closet". If the dealers of collectibles decide they will deal in model horses, they can only sell at what the market will bear. If the model is overpriced, it will be left there, until the dealer decided to reduce it. We don't have to buy, but I would like to be able to buy at a fair price rather than see a charcoal running stallion sell for $3.00 to a woman to let her "jiddies" play with it.

BREYER ARABIAN MODELS

COLLEEN BROWN
DIANE FISHER

The Arabian has been one of the most popular models in the Breyer horse line. The Arabian Family has been in the Breyer line since the beginning. The Proud Arabian Mares and Foals were also part of the beginnings of Breyer, discontinued for a time and re-introduced in the early 70's with the Proud Arabian Stallion. Later Breyer added the classic arab family from Hagen-Renaker molds and has expanded on that line with the new special run from Sears.

Breyer has also made other Arabian molds. The Running Mare, Stallion and Foal were all introduced as Arabians. They also make the Black Stallion and Sham. Below is a list of the Arabian models which Breyer has produced and following are pictures of some of those models.

Also, for those who may not know, the Proud Arabian Mare and Foal were first introduced in 1958. In 1963, the mold was changed to the present Family Arab Mare & Foal to accompany the Family Arab Stallion. In 1971, they were re-introduced to accompany the Proud Arabian Stallion, however, since only one half of the mold could be found, a new one was cast slightly changing the back legs.
